COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

Hongkong, Wednesday Evening. The unpropitions state of the weather has had a visible effect on business to-day, and notwithstanding that we have reached a period of the year when more or less activity should pervade all branches of trade, the general markets still continue singgish and without movement. Business seems to have been at quite a standstill, and, with the exception of a few sales noted below, nothing has been doing. The Opium market shows no change, a few meagre sales have been effected at yesterday's rates, which have ruled without alteration to-day, viz: $610 for New Patna, 6590 for Old Patna, $595 for New Benares, and $565 for Old Benares. Malwa is nominally quoted at $765, and with sales New Patna at $6175. Ootton seems to have been the only article in the Import market that has been in demand, and of this the Chinese are nowbuying very readily and in considerable quantities. Sales to day include 2,055 bales Bengal Staple Comtative as another's. The delaste, however, to pared with folly like this, at any rate, the line tative as another's. The debate, however, to which we have referred, and the resolution which was carried in consequence, implies an extension of these free social principles for which one was hardly prepared. For the future no representative of the great Republic at a foreign Court is to worr the Court-dress of the foreign Court is to worr the Court-dress of the foreign country to which have a carried in consequence, implies an all admiration. There is so little danger of our all admiration. There is so little danger of our formerly occupied by Messra Bahtmann & Co.

Apply to THOMAS WALLACE, the foreign Court is to worr the Court-dress of the foreign Court is to worr the Court-dress of the foreign portion of solvably usage which country to which he is accredited. This curious away a certain portion of cobwebby usage which pieces of legislation is due to Mr. Sammer, who in does not make public life any more dignified.

Two COMMODIOUS HOUSES, situated in does not make public life any more dignified. troduced the resolution into the Schale. In the and free. Lower Chamber it gave rise to unbounded jososity. One honourable member, it appears, moved an amendment not only furbidding a diplomate from wearing a Court dress, but also prescribing the Houses, Lands, Tenements, &c. kind of dress which he shall wear on great occasions. Among other items in this proposed costume, there was to be "a cooked hat looped nn with an American eagle," and "a swallow-tailed coat with stars and strines on the tails, hutter nut mantaloons, close-fitting yellowstock. ings with gaiters, and a backskin vest with one side black and the other side white." But this lat of July next. elegant barmour was far exceeded by another mentleman, who moved "that diplometic agente shall not be parmitted to wear any. Court-dress except such as shall be prescribed. and the patterns drawn, by the chief tollar of the ration, who is now providing over its destinies." This graceful reference to the fact that Mr lobusou had once been a tailor was at once Been to be so steeped in wit and fancy that the House was convulsed with laughter. Some English people are very augry at this, and insist that it is only in a democratic country that a man could be taunted with the lowness of his origin. This, however, is a mataken view of the matter. The speaker, himself a man of low origin, did not mean what he said as a taunt, but as a joke and bit of humour. Even from this point of view it is had and rude enough. The oke is aspecimen of that sort of fun which consists in throwing vourself ironically and for the toir d'Escompte, at present in the occupation of your own, and measuring an object by an alien the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan. of the stage of manners at which they have arrived. It would be impossible in our House of

By an inscrutable mental process, the THOS, W. BARRING? shoe-buckles and swallow-tails recalled to the mind of Mr. Banks the alleged prophecy of Eurgot, that the United States would prove to be the Carthage of the modern world. Mr. Banks puta trolyremarkableandoriginal interpretation upon this. For it is usually supposed that in the Gues Street, No. 9. For particulars, apply to ancient world Carthage was, on the whole, somehing like a failure. At all events, nobody thinks that the Carthaginians impressed their ideas very deeply or permanently on the surrounding world. But people like Mr. Banks choose to have new theories of history, just as they choose to have everything else new. So he supposes that the Carthaginian function which the United Itales are destined to fulfil in the great Statesystem of the modern world is to impress new notions upon the mind of Europe. For the future, the grand storehouse of fertilizing ideas for Europe will no longer be the mystical East. but the more fresh and glarious West. We are to begin simply, and to advance gradually from things small to the very greatest. Breeches will be the form in which American missionery effort will first touch the heart and understand ng of Europe. Her initial function is to teach Europe bow to dross. If an Englishman goes to the Court of Dahomey. Mr. Banks might ask does he doff his own habitual raiment and don a fig leaf, a string of boads, and a but? Why, then, should an American citizen at St. James's or the Tuildries array himself in a flowered satin waistcoat, a snuff-coloured coat, and a sword, simply because the barbarous I Queen's Road East, lately occurred by the etiquette of those Courts prescribes such absurd Ornthal Bank of Western India. Longum est iter per presepta, brove et effican per exempla. Mr. Banks apparently believes in an original and peculiar modification of the famous saying of Fletcher of Saltoun.

Let who will make laws for Europe, provided America may furnish the pattern for its cont and breeches. Mr. Summer is much too senable a man to sympathize with this extraordinary and most exalted notion of the huminess o American representatives in Europe. It is said. indeed, that he brought the motion forward, not in order to favour Europe with choice specimens of America or Uarthaginian tailoring, but simply because that nowerful originality on which his nation so justly prides itself had impelled some of the Ambaesadors to devise Court-dresses for themselves, so fearfully and wonderfully made as to fill every decent American who saw them with an unpleasant awe or equally unpleasant shame. From this point of view, the resolution forbidding the Ambaecadors. to appear in any dress but that of an ordinary American citizen assumes the air of a distinct murk of respect, to our feelings. What is intended is not that Europe shall be proselylized. but that it shall cease to laugh at the costumes of too original and inventive Americana. That constructive genius which is so strikexhibited in everything practical, from iron-clad ships down to apple-parers, for some reason or other breaks down when it comes to [ ]. trousers and coats. The truth is that an esthe- the occupation of the Undersigned tio element enterd into breeches.
